SONG OF THE PIONEER. On the wild frontier I have lived alone, Without wealth or friends to call my own. I have had no wife nor children dear,

I have made my bed by the low-land lake, While around me crept the rattle-snake: And slept upon the mountain drear, Where enemies were lurking near.

I have hunted the bear with the bravest men, And slew the wolf in his native den; Over the sand and through the snow Have tracked the deer and buffalo.

And oft been forced to flee for life From the Comanche's scalping-knife.
